Susan – There are two updates I want to provide you regarding the GLP program. First, there are several outside parties that would like to come talk to us about regarding future work with China under the GLP program. They have both contacted you previously. The first is USDA. If you recall, earlier this year you responded to a letter from the USDA Under Secretary for Trade and Agricultural Foreign Affairs who wrote you to express his concerns that we were not renewing a letter of intent to work with China on the mutual acceptance of data between the two countries (see attached). Recently, Martha Segall received a request for a meeting by one of the Division Directors in the Foreign Agricultural Service at USDA to follow up on the concerns they raised in the correspondence, including the impact that new regulations in China will have on U.S. agricultural exports and the need for us to enter into an agreement with China so that export disruptions do not happen.

Separately from USDA, we have been contacted by FMC (who manufactures pesticides), D.C. Legislative and Regulatory Services, Inc (who represents FMC), and CropLife Americas. They want to come in together to discuss the role of EPA in GLP capacity development in China, how we evaluate compliance of studies conducted in China, and authorized uses of PRIA funds for inspection programs.

We plan to set these meetings up soon and will include OITA, OGC, and OPP. We will be in listening mode and will not make any commitments; however, before we went any further I wanted to make sure you are aware of these requests and you are okay with us meeting with them. Please let me know.

The second item is related to the long-term plan for the GLP Program. We having been discussing internally the best path forward and one option we want to explore further is engaging OPP on the idea of moving the GLP program to their office along with the new resources from the PRIA reauthorization. I wanted to check if you have any thoughts or concerns about this approach before we meet with them.

Thx
